

Alternate Futures Announces Pact with DataCore Systems to Assist Smaller Companies Alternate Futures Announces Pact with DataCore Systems to Assist Smaller Companies

Alternate Futures, LLC has agreed to add DataCore's CIO Services Program to its roster of services. Smaller companies that do not need a full time CIO benefit greatly.

Cheshire, CT (PRWEB) August 20, 2004 -- Alternate Futures, LLC, announced today that they had concluded an agreement with DataCore Systems, Inc. to provide Alternate Futures' clients with DataCore's innovative CIO program.

Under the program, smaller and mid-size companies that can benefit from the services of a CIO can do so without the expense required to have a full-timer on staff. CIOs (Chief Information Officers) provide critical assistance in the areas of technology, manpower, resource allocation, business continuity and strategic leverage of information assets.

"We're very excited to add DataCore's expertise to our portfolio of service offerings," said Alternate Futures' President, Gregory M. Sparzo. "[DataCore President] Henry Osborne brings a fabulous understanding of the IT issues facing companies today," he added.

"We picked Alternate Futures, to partner with because of the fantastic synergy between our two companies, " DataCore CEO Henry Osborne added.

"As the business world gets more complex, and the needs and requirements of today's environment continue to grow, smaller companies often need as much help as their much larger counterparts and competitors." the two said in a jointly published statement.
